SEVEN KILLED SIXTEEN HURT IN GA. WRECK

Coach Drops 50 Feet Into Creek When Wheel Bursts

MANY FATALLY HURT

Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Train Nearly Across Trestle When Last Car Suddenly Topples Over.

Atlanta, March 14.—Seven persons were killed and 16 injured yesterday when a passenger coach on the Atlanta Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad was derailed near Union City. The car went off a trestle and fell 50 feet.

Thirty persons were in the coach, the last of the train, when one of the wheels burst. The trestle was reached and almost crossed, when the car suddenly turned over, tearing away from the one ahead as it fell into the shallow creek.

Six men and one woman were killed, and several of the injured are not expected to live.

For hours rescue parties worked in the wreckage, releasing those imprisoned and removing the dead, the injured being removed to hospitals here.

The following list of dead was issued by officials of the railroad last night:

C. T. Elsmore, cashier local station Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad Company.

W. E. McIntosh, Imperial Hotel, New York City.

B. C .Driver, Roanoke, Alabama.

W. E. Johnson, Birmingham, Alabama.

R. W. Lanier, operator, Senoia, Georgia.

Mrs. I. H. Etheridge, Atlanta, Ga.

W. M. Brooks, Western Union. Telegraph Company, Manchester, Ga.

A graphic description of the wreck was givn by H. F. Hentz, one of the survivors, who was seated in the front of the car and escaped without injury.

An irregular motion of the car just before the trestle was reached was the first indication that something was wrong, he said.

"About five seconds later," continued Mr. Henz, "we suddenly plunged backward into space. A crash followed and there were screams from all portions of the car.

"Those of us who occupied the front section, when we regained our senses, looked for an avenue to escape. An opening was found through the front door .I managed to assist the three women who were with me through the opening and then returned to help the others. One young man, apparently crushed, was the first person I found. He refused to let me help him, but urged me to assist the women and children. He sat there calmly smoking a cigarette, as if nothing out of the ordinary had happened. I learned later on that this young man was Willard Cope, a newspaper man.

"I have never seen such a wonderful courage as that of the women passengers. Several were seriously injured, but without exception they implored members of the rescue party to pass them by and help others who were in worse condition.

"Another example of courage displayed by one of the women convinces me that in a crisis of that kind women are possessed with greater nerve than are men. This little woman looked as if she were dying. Her face was as white as a sheet I bent over and asked how she was feeling.

" 'I'm all right; don't bother me. Help the others," she cried. Before I left the wreck she was being taken to an ambulance. I again asked her if there was anything I could do for her. She shook her head."

B. L. Bugg, receiver of the railroad, issued a formal statement last night, stating that the accident was caused by the braking of a new wheel on the front truck of the coach.

City Council Tonight

Report on White Way March 28 and Final Action Early in April

The semi-monthly meeting of City Council will be held tonight. The white way proposition will again be up before Council However, it will not be up for final action. It is undertsood that when it is presented to Common Council that body will simply concur in the action of the Board of Aldermen at their last meeting, when they referred the measure to the joint committee on light, finance and streets, the aldermen having added the committee on streets to the list of committees to which the matter was referred.

This joint committee, then, at the next meeting, which will be held March 28, will make their report, and under the rules it will lay over in the Board of Aldermen. Final action on the ordinance, therefore, will not be taken till early in April.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

(From Our Special Correspondent.)

Washington, March 14.—The biggest problem that the Interstate Commerce Commission has wrestled with since Government control of the railroads ceased will be taken under advisement at the conclusion of hearings on the rate questions. Every line of activity relating to railway traffic, including operation and financing, has been heard by the commission Railroad presidents and other officials have presented their cause, the railroad brotherhoods have had their day in court, and the shippers have submitted their arguments.

The newest and what is regarded as one of the most vital of all the many angles of the big industrial problems, is the effort to conserve the integrity of the railroad securities of the country through the prescribing of a rate that would be adequate to maintain the carriers on a sound, wholesome basis. The railroads hold that 6 per cent return on the value of railroad property is not to be regarded as an adequate permanent basis. They claim that that rate just escapes being confiscatory.

Nothing has developed within the past 24 hours to change the attitude of the American Government that the allies shall see to it that the United States is reimbursed for the maintenance of the army of occupation on the Rhine. It was declared at the State Department today that under the treaty of Versailles and under the terms of the armistice it was agreed specifically that the United States should share in whatever reparations were demanded from Germany in order to defray the cost for the maintenance of our troops in German territory. It was pointed out that this is a "first charge." which should be met before any other obligations are settled, and that the United States has just as much right to share in any reparations as England, France or any of the allied governments. The United States will not stand idly by and see England and France gobble up everything collected from Germany, leaving us to collect the money spent in maintaining our troops on the Rhine in any way possible. These troops, it was asserted today, were sent to Germany at the special request of the allies, and and have been maintained there, not for any benefit of our own, but at the explicit request of those European nations now seeking to repudiate the debt owing to us.

The Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee and the Republican secretary of the Treasury are just now in the midst of a bitter fight over the action of Secretary Mellon in his latest letter to Chairman Fordney, in which he points out almost insuperable objections to the passage of the bonus in the form contemplated by Fordney's committee. The end of this row is not in sight, but it is likely to split in twain the entire Republican organizaton and the administration itself. Mellon will undoubtedly be backed up by President Harding in his contentions that the country can not stand for any bonus at this time. Fordney and other Republican leaders are insisting that some sort of a bonus must be passed. It is just possible that such a proposition wil not even get through the House, and it is almost a certainty that the bonus as framed now will meet a quick death when it reaches the Senate.

Action of the House Appropriations Committee revealed in its report on the army appropriation bill that Congress will take the initiative in determining the disposition of American troops on foreign soil. The committee, taking unto itself power that has always hitherto been exercised by the President, provided in the bill for the return of all troops from Germany by July 1. It provided for the reduction in the Hawaiian force from 13.000 to 5,000 men; reduction of the Panama force from 8,000 to 5,000 men, and withdrawal of the regiment now stationed in China As there are 9,000 men in Germany. the total cut in forces in foreign fields is about 20,000.

Hitherto. Congress has always respected the President's position as commander in chief of the army and navy, and has permitted him to dispose of the American army and navy as he saw fit. assigning troops whenever and wherever he chose. The action of the Appropriations Committee means the taking away from the President the authority to place troops where he chooses and if the precedent is followed, Congress may even dictate where troops can be assigned within continental United States.

Isaac Gregg.

RUSH TO PAY UNCLE SAM INCOME TAXES

Tomorrow Will be The Last Day For Payment

2500 PAID THUS FAR

Number of Persons Making Returns Greater Than Last Year—Office Open Tomorrow Night.

There was a steady stream of persons today at the local revnue office having their income tax returns fixed up by the staff at that office which is located on the third floor of the postoffice building. The rush will en dtomorrow night. All those who fail to file returns by the closing of the office tomorrow night will be subjected to the usual penalties provided by law.

Thus far approximately 2500 persons, most of whom are residents of Alexandria, have filed returns with this office. Officials, however, dclined to state whether or not there was a dropping off in the returns as compared with last year, saying they would rather this would come from headquarters. It was, however, stated that the number of persons who made returns this year is larger than the number filed last year.

Discussing the returns filed L. B. Howard, division chief, declared that the attaches of the office feel grateful for the promptness on the part of citizens in making their returns, thus obviating th rush generally encountered on the last day or day before the closing. As a result the six officials at this office are able to handle the work, although they are kept busy from the time of opening till the hour of closing.

It was stated by Mr. Howard this morning that for the accomodation of the tardy ones the office will be open from 8 o'clock tomorrow morning till are are accomodated tomorrow night. He urges all persons who have not yet filed their income tax returns to do so at once so that thy will not me penalized for their failure.

The local office force engaged in the task of helping persons file their returns is composed of L. B. Howard, division chief; G. A. Jones, assistant division chief; C. A. Strauss, B. S. Norman, E. D. Turner, Jr., and Mrs. C. H. Duncan.

It was only a comparatively recent date that bells were used for calling people to church. For ages they were designed solely for keeping evil spirits at a safe distance.

WILL VETO THE BONUS BILL IF TAX IS IGNORED

President Considers Measure Dead For This Session of Congress

DRY ENFORCEMENT

Liquor Bill Goes to Attorney General —Haynes to Lose Job—Will Make Test Case.

Fort Pirce, Fla., March 14.—Information came ashore from the houseboat in which the President is taking a 10 day vacation in Florida waters yesterday afternoon that he will veto any bill for a soldier bonus which does not carry a tax as the source of revenue

It can be stated with official consent that the Administration now regards the soldier bonus legislation as vritually dead, so far as the present session of Congress is concerned. That this attitude of the Executive means the death of the bonus efforts is regarded as certain, as it is not assumed for a minute that the Senate will override the Executive, no matter what steps the House may take.

It was also announced today that: The prohibition enforcement division of the Treasury will be transferred to the Department of Justice, and its complete reorganization is to be made an outstanding feature of the general overhauling of the administrative machinry of the Government.

Attorney General Daugherty had ordered the seizure of the British merchantman Grayson Ruby, known to be a rum runner, off the Massachusetts coast and that an international test will be made.

The President, will make an official trip to Alaska between July 8 when he attends the Marion centennial, and August 14, when he will be the guest of the Order of Moose at Moosecheart, Ind.

The President feels little or no anxiety over the fate of the four-power treaty now under debate in the Senate, his information being that the votes for ratification are in sight.

The Presidential party sailed toward Palm Beach last night. It will leave that city by train tomorrow night for St. Augustine, and will remain at that resort until the end of the week before proceeding toward Washington.

Although the Administration's present attitude on bonus legislation had been well understood by those accompanying the President on this trip, it had not been clearly outlined until members of his party came ashore here today while he himself golfed on the Fort Pierce links

There can be no question now that Mr. Harding is prepared to overrule Congress on the proposed "pawnbroker" compensation bill if that measure is sent to him for approval. Nor can there be any question that he expects to be upheld in case of a veto by the Senate. It is regarded as possible, even likely, that the House would muster the necessary two thirds to overrride an Executive vote.

As the situation is viewed from the Administration standpoint, therefore, there will be no soldier bonus before the coming election unless Congress reconsiders the sales tax proposal and enacts a bill levying such tax as a means of meeting the bonus outlay.

Historic Site to be Saved

The army appropriations bill provides for $100 to care for the birthplace of George Washington at Wakefield, Va., now said to be in a condition of neglect.

The fence needs repairing, according to testimony before the Appropriations Committee, and the site is overgrown with weeds.

Washington's birthplace is 96 miles below Washington on the Potomac River and cannot be reached by railroads or automobiles. The site is 11.88 acre in area and can be reached only by ferrying down the river, then inland by a dirt road.

The house in which Washington was born has disappeared and all that remains is a small monument marking the spot.

HIGHWAY WORK TO BE STARTED BY MAY FIRST

Report of City Doing Its Part Submitted

TO LET CONTRACT SOON

Commerce Directors Seek to Have North Washington Street Extended Improved—Elect Four Members.

The construction of the highway between the corporate limits of this city and Fairfax Courthouse, a distance of fourteen miles, will be started not later than May 1. Announcement to this effect was made yester day afternoon at a meeting of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce. The committee having charge of the work from this body reported that everything had been done, as far as the committe was concerned, the city having agreed to pay its proportion of the cost of the interest charges and now nothing remains to be done before the actual work of construction, but to advertise for bids, issue the bonds, and some other detail work.

It was announced that the work of improving north Washington street extended probably will be started this spring. The Chamber, in addition to having the highway improved also is endeavoring to see that sidewalks are laid. This work, it is stated, will be done under the direction of the State Highway Commission and the United States Bureau of Public Roads Just now this road is a much traveled thoroughfare, many men employed at the Potomac Railroad yards and the Fruit Express daily walking to their ploces of employment over this road, and the laying of sidewalks, it was pointed out, would be a big help to these men.

A number of other matters of interest are taken up and reports submitted and discussed.

Four new members were elected to membership in this organization. They are as follows: Premier Cleaners and Dyers, Alexandria Laundry, Inc.; J. S. Blackwell and Charles D. Welch.

IN CONGRESS YESTERDAY

SENATE

Met at 11 a. m. and recessed at 5:03 p. m. until today at noon.

After debate on the four-power treaty extending over a period of five hours an agreement was reached to vote not later than 4 o'clock this afternoon on the Robinson amendment.

Notwithstanding the letter of Secretary Hughes read last Saturday by Senator Underwood, Senator Borah insisted that who wrote the treaty still remained a mystery.

Speaking for two hours in his first extended speech on the treaty, Senator Borah charged that the treaty was an alliance, but even accepting the interpretation of its friends it still made for entanglements.

Speaking in support of his amendment, Senator Robinson(Democrat), Arkansas, declared the committee reservation was intended "to attract votes of senators who fear the treaty is an alliance." His amendment, which proposes an obligation to refrain from aggression in the Pacific, Senator Robinson argued, would be a long step toward peace.

Passed the McNally bill authorizing the Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion, to extend for two years from next December the time for payment of construction and water charges on Federal irrigation projects.

Under the terms of a resolution introduced by Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, the purchase of any air machine of any type from foreign sources would be forbidden without the approval of Congress.

By a vote of 7 to 2 the judiciary committee decided against all legislation proposing Federal charters for private organiations which are not formed for the purpose of executing some powers granted under the Constitution.

Publication of a report by Senator Walsh (Democrat), Montana, scoring former Attorney General Palmer for methods used in raids on alien radicals before it was considered either by a subcommittee that investigated the charges or the full committee precipitated an acrimonious discussion in the judiciary committee.

The judiciary committee ordered a favorable report on a bill providing for a sliding scale of salaries of from $2,500 to $5,000 for clerks in Federal district courts.

Announcement was made that the judiciary committee would tomorrow pass upon the eligibility of Senator Smoot and Representative Burton to act as members of the allied debt-refunding commission.

HOUSE

Met at noon and adjourned at 1:45 p. m. until noon today.

The agricultural appropriation bill, carrying approximately $35,000,000 was passed by the House after members had been forced on record on the question of putting back the $360,000 item for free seed, which was eliminated by the committee framing the measure.

The seed appropriation was in the bill when it was presented to the House proper, but on a point of order by Representative McArthur(Republican), Oregon, opposing the distribution, a roll call was ordered. The free seed advocates won by a vote of 173 to 142. The bill as sent to the Senate is about $4,000,000 under last year's appropriations.

The appropriation committee reported the annual army appropriation bill, so drawn as to necessitate reduction of the army to 115,000 enlistment and 11,000 officers. The bill as reported carries $270,353,030.

Representative Treadway issued a statement declaring that President Harding's position was sound and that inasmuch as a sales tax is not advisable at this time bonus legislation should be postponed.

In a formal statement Representative Hawes (Democrat), Missouri, a member of the American Legion characterized the bonus bill as a "gold brick" by which members of Congress hope to catch the soldier vote next November.

Mr. Hawes asserted that the whole proposal was a "get rich quick" scheme, which if presented by a private citizen would be banned in every State by "blue sky" laws.

The banking committee favorably reported a bill by Chairman McFadden under which there would be a reduction of from five to three in the number of condition reports to be made annually by national banks to the comptroller of the currency.

It is expected that the House committee on reform in the civil service will today report favorably the Sterling bill passed last week by the Senate specifically writing into the law the right to retirement of 80,000 government employes who were denied retirement pensions under a ruling by Attorney General Daugherty.

Illustrated Lectures

Lieutenant Dennis Whittle, M. C., British army, will deliver a very interesting lecture on "Historic England" at the Young People's building next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The lecture will be illustrated by splendid lantern slides from photographs made by Mr. and Mrs. Whittle during a motor trip through England last summer. Mr. Whittle will also sing a number of typical English songs. Everyone interested is cordially invited to attend this lecture, which is being given under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A.

PACIFIC TREATY GOES TO VOTE IN THE SENATE

Agreement Reached to Vote on Amendment to 4-Power Treaty

PACT IS ATTACKED

Johnson and Borah Are the Leaders—Call Treaty National "Surrender" and Breeder of Wars.

Washington, March 14.—Opponents of the Four-Power Pacific treaty , loosed another series of broadsides against the pact yesterday in the Senate, but slackened their onslaught just before adjournment to accept a unanimous consent agreement for a vote today on the first of the proposed amendments.

Senators Johnson, California, and Borah, of Idaho, both Republicans, took the lead in the all-day attack, the former declaring ratification of the treaty would be a national "surrender" under a threat of danger and the latter asserting that the proposed Four-Power arrangement would transfer to the aPcific the old balance of power system that has dominated Europe for centuries.

A question as to the authorship of the treaty and its supplemental agreements again was raised during the debate, Mr. Borah asserting that despite Secretary Hughes' letter accepting responsibility for final drafts there seems to be "the most conclusive proof that somebody else wrote the treaty."

The amendment on which it was agreed to vote at 4 p. m. tomorrow was proposed by Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, and will be the first issue of the Four-Power treaty fight to come to a roll call. As modified today by Mr. Robinson, it provides that the rights of nations, both in and out of the Four-Power group, are to be respected, and that non-signatory as well as signatory nations shall be invited to any conference held to conside rcontroversies affecting their insular interests in the Pacific "or any Far Eastern question."

Administration leaders declared tonight they had sufficient votes to defeat the amendment, which has been touched on very little in the debate during the several days that it has been technically before the Senate. Senator Robinson made a short speech today favoring its adoption in the interest, he said, of fair play for Russia, China and other non-signatory nations, and Senator Lenroot, Republican, Wisconsin, argued against it on the ground that it would impose blanket obligations going even beyond the League of Nations covenant.

Senator Johnson's address of more than two hours was directed, largely, against the declaration of the treaty's supporters that its chief benefit lay in the provision abrogating the Anglo-Japanese Alliance. If solemn assurances of Great Britain and Japan regarding the purposes of the Alliance were to be credited, he said, then it contained no menace to the United States, while if these assurances were to be regarded as false, then this Government should not go into partnership with nations which had practiced deception.

The Four-Power agreement, said Senator Johnson, would amount to an "alliance" and would impose obligations not dissimilar from those of the League Covenant. The chief difference between the new treaty and the League, he declared, seemed to be that it bore a Republican instead of a Democratic label

Senator Borah, in turn, likened the treaty to the Triple Entente of Europe, which, he said, did not bind Great Britain and Russia to go to the aid of France in 1914, but nevertheless resulted in concerted action by all the Entnete powers. The Four-Power treaty might not impose any legal obligation on Congress to declare war, he asserted, but it provided for a conference which might easily result in a moral obligation which Congress could not escape.

The treaty, Senator Borah pointed out, did not limit the "means" to be considered jointly by the four powers to "pacific means," but left the door open for the conference to decide on concerted action. He predicted that formation of the Four-Power group would lead to the establishment of a "counter group," and eventually to a war between the two rival combinations thus placed in the field.

Just before the senate accepted the unanimous consent agreement, which was proposed by Senator Swanson, Democrat, Virginia, Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, assailed Republicans who formerly had opposed the Versailles treaty but now support the Four-Power treaty, declaring they were ready to take "medicine handed us in a spoon held by a Republican President," although they had refused it when it came from a Democrat.

The Angelus bell, always rung thrice a day, takes its name from the first words of the prayer. The De Profundis bell sounds one hour after the Ave.

CRITICIZING THE GOVERNOR

We understand that during the past session of the legislature, Governor Trinkle came in for a certain amount of criticism amongst the solons for advocating measures they disapproved. We believe, however, that the great majority of the people would have been on the side of the Governor and against these unwise and stubborn legislators, if a vote of the electorate could have been had. We rather feel inclined to congratulate Mr. Trinkle on the class and character of his opposition.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

The 1922 session of the legislature just adjourned has written some good history and some bad history. Included in the good is the refusal to consolidate the University of Virginia Medicine School with the Medical College of Virginia. In the bad is included the defect of the $12,000,000 road bond bill. We have not learned as yet how our own delegate and state senator voted or aligned themselves on each measure.

Virginia is fifty years behind the times in her highways, and the recent disastrous defeat of a bill designed to place her in the ranks of her progressive neighbors, will certainly add nothing to her reputation.

Y. M. C. A. CLASS

One of the encouraging signs of progress in Alexandria is the phenomenal success of the classes organized by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. A total attendance of 561 for the month of February is somewhat startling to those who are not abreast of what is going on in Alexandria. The course includes subjects so varied as Girls' Dressmaking and Shakespeare. The former, naturally enough, leads with an attendance of 237; the latter has the surprising total of 82. The in-betweens, teaching cooking, citizenship, physical education, and women's dressmaking, ran from 21 in citizenship to 175 in physical education. The mind, the eye, the body—all receive training in these classes, and the good they are doing is inestimable. In addition free motion pictures were exhibited to some 250 girls.

The Gazette takes pleasure in complimenting the ladies of the Auxiliary on the success that has crowned their work, and to bespeak for them the aid and support of our citizens in general.

THE BELLS

Innumerable and interesting are the traditions surrounding bells.

Bells have ever played an important part in religious ceremonies.

There are numerous legends that consecrated bells would, if stolen, ree turn to their own home, ringing all the way.

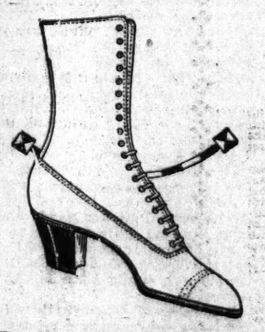
Do You Walk With a Smile or a Limp?

Wearers of Cantilever Shoes walk with an easy poise that bespeaks freedom from foot troubles. They step out with easy carriage, ankles straight and steady, feet arched with natural grace. They can walk for a long time without fatigue. And that swinging walk brings health and a greater capacity for happiness.

Well-fitted shoes contribute importantly to your strength and to your happiness. They must provide room for the toes, and freedom for the flexible arch of the foot. They must not check the free play of the muscles.

Ordinary stiff-shanked shoes bind the foot and prohibit its natural movement. But the Cantilever Shoe has a flexible shank that bends with the foot. The shoe yields with every step, encourages the foot muscles to exercise, and keep strong.



The Cantilever last follows the outline of the foot. The toes may stretch luxuriously. They point ahead as they should for comfort and correct posture. The set of the heel tends to distribute the weight so that the body is well-poised. And the shoes are good-looking, graceful, trim, correct.

Overheard in Swann Bros. store recently: Lady speaking to one of the firm—"Did you ever see so much yelow? I've just returned from New York, and everything there, on the streets, in the stores, at the theater, everywhere, yellow, in all its shades, from palest yellow to deepest orange. It's beautiful." And so it is.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer C. Bell of Young Wood, Pa., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dixon, on Peyton avenue, Del Ray, several days last week. Mr. Bell is a prominent farmer of his community, and his wife a teacher in the Young Wood high school. The young couple were here on their bridal trip and sight-seeing in Washington and other nearby places of interest.

Mr and Mrs. Harry Dawson entertained last Saturday from 3 to 5 at their home in St. Elmo with a birthday party for their young grandson, Master Leslie Myers, Jr. The young guests were: Louise Payne, June Varney, Edna and Stanley Keys, Margaret Roberts, Virginia and Lester Norton, Felix Young, Ellen and Martha Varney and Anna Eathorn.

The "concert" which was given on February 17 by the Yates Class will be repeated, with additional members, on the night of Saturday, March 18, in the auditorium of Mt. Vernon Avenue school, Del Ray, on which occasion it will be given under the auspices of the local department of the Methodist Missionary Society Felters' Orchestra, which delighted teh audience at teh first concert, will give an even more extensive program at this time, and would alone be worth the price of the tickets. Tickets are now on sale and may be obtained from members of the Yates class and the misisonary society, at the popular price—children 25 cents, adults 35 cents. Enter- 8 p. m.

Th comedy "Cinderella at College" which the Dramatic Club of George Mason High School presented last Friday night in Mt. Vernon Avenue School auditorium, was a most delightful performance before a full house. The characters were well assignd and the parts creditably played. Compliments on the success of the play are still being received. Where all the parts were so well played it is hard to name the good work of each, although the characters of Cinderella, by Lorene Spivey; Mary Flannigan, by Frances Spencer, and Patrick Quinn, by Ralph Saffelle, might be mentioned especially. Frances Yates gave a recitation, "Her Sister's Beau," during the intermission between the second and third acts. Music was furnished by Miss Louise Spivey at the piano, and Mr. Linwood Mooney with the violin.

THE WORLD WILL MISS BERT WILLIAMS

Death of Famous Colored Comedian Ends Brilliant Career Abruptly

Bert Williams, forld-famous comedian, has taken his final curtain call To everyone here and abroad the news that Bert Williams is gone will be received with the shock of a man who has lost a friend

Bert Williams, a universally popular star, had the unusual ability to put into his songs and stories the humorous quality and philosophy of the negro race.

A short time ago Williams summed up his secret of making people laugh in these words: "You know there is nothing so funny as seeing other people in trouble. Of course the emphasis must be placed on the fact that the trouble belongs to somebody else. A real sense of humor is to put yourself in another's place and laugh at your own misfortune."

Williams was born at New Providence, Nassau, in the British Bahamas. His grandfather, who was white, was Danish, and Spanish consul to the Bahamas, and married a quadroon. When he was 2 years old Frederick Williams, father of the comedian, was brought to New York. Here he learned the trade of papier mache maker, which brought him into contact with theatrical people. It was through this association that Bert as a boy made his first acquaintances among New York stage folk.

From New York Frederick Williams moved to Riverside, Cal., where Bert was educated, and graduatd from Riverside High School. His aim had been to become a civil engineer. His interest in the theater always had been keen, however, and unable to resist the urge he started as a member of a little company of minstrels. From that moment he progressed steadily, winning the good will of his public and the respect of his associates.

In 1903, when the Williams and Walker Company played at the Shaftesbury Theater, in London, Williams was invited to attend a lawn party at Buckingham Palace to entertain guests at the birthday celebration of the Prince of Wales. His demeanor so delighted royalty that he remained until his death a favorite with Londoners.

After the illness of Walker, his partner, became permanent a few years ago, Williams carried on alone He took care of the man who had been his teammate until the latter's death Booker T. Washington once wrote of Williams:

"Bert Williams is a eremendous asset of the negro race. The fact of his success aids the negro many times more than he could have helped the race by merely contenting himself to whine about racial difficulties. The fact is, the American people are ready to honor any man who does something worth while, irrespective of his color."

At the time preceding his death, Williams was apeparing in "Under the Bamboo Tree" He suffered a breakdown in Detroit and was brought to his home in New York ill of pneumonia, where he died.

Some of the most successful productions in which Williams and Walker appeared as a team were "Two Real Coons," "The Gold Bug," "Senagambian Carnival," "Sons of Ham" and "In Dahomey." It was with the last-named production that they appeared so successfully in London. George Walker died in 1907, and Williams was featured alone in "Mr. Lode of Coal." In 1911 he made a Ziegfield contract under which he appeared in "The Follies" for ten years. At the close of his Ziegfield contract and just prior to opening in "Under the Bamboo Tree," he started in "Broadway Brevities."

It seems impossible to believe we have seen the world-famous Williams' walk and the humorous poker game pantomime for the last time; that the voice which made such songs as "Nobody," "Woodman Spare That Tree," "Everybody Wants the Key to My Cellar," and "When the Moon Shines on the Moonshine" classics the world over, is still.

Fortunately, the genius of Bert Williams has not died. For a number of years the songs and stories of the great colored comedian have been reproduced exclusively on Columbia records And so, while Bert Williams is dead, his work still lives.

"I received your trial package of Ironized Yeast last week, and I cannot tell you how much better I feel. Before I finished the trial I knew it was helping me, so I purchased a full package.

"My husband is just delighted with the improvement in me. He tells me I have more life now than I ever had. Why, I always used to feel 'all-in' after my housework, but now I can do more work than ever, and never feel the least bit tired. Ironized Yeast is splendid!" —And thousands of others tell the same story.

The Reason Behind the Results

The reason Ironized Yeast brings such amazing results in so many cases is because it not only contains just the right amount of all three essential vitamines, but in addition contains a type of yeast which has positively no equal as a reconstructive agent—a yeast which is cultured expressly for medicinal purposes, and which is entirely different from the yeast found in ordinary "yeast tablets."

But even more important than this is the fact that this yeast has been ironized—or treated through a scientific process with a special form of easily assimilated organic iron, similar to the iron found in spinach. When yeast is ironized in this manner it is found that results are not only more permanent, but are secured just twice as quickly!

Thrift means a higher standard of livlng without added expenses, the dignity of serving oneself, and domeslic independence.

The female of the species is more thrifty than the male

THRIFT is the master word in postwar economics—but what is thrift? In a small way, it means the saving of existing materials which otherwise might be lost. In a large way, it means the saving of human effort by putting natural forces to work. Every big employer, every efficiency engineer knows that, and knows that machines work cheaper than men. But the average housewife does not yet appreciate the fact that machines work cheaper than women; and until she learns this lesson, thrift in the home is handicapped.

It is cheaper to ride from New York to San Francisco in a Pullman car than to walk. Therefore, the railroad and sleeping car tickets represent thrift. It is cheaper to buy cloth from the factory than to work the spinning wheel and hand loom in the home. Therefore, the visit to the dry-goods store represents thrift. When all women understand that household machinery belongs in the same class as the factory and the railway train, that it is an actual money saver, not a luxury or an extravagance, housework will be revolutionized in a hurry.

Women frequently say: "If men had to do housework for a year, they would know more about it." Dear ladies, they would—and you wouldn't know your own job when you got it back. Tie a man to a broom, washboard and scrubbing brush for twelve months, and he would use his head to save his hands as he never had used it before Women are naturally industrious, and in that virtue lies their danger. They have an inherited habit of working for work's sake. Men, being hunting animals and naturally lazy, work only to get something done; and if they can figure a way to saw off the job by steam or electricity, they do it, quick.

This difference in native industry explains why a frail little woman often supports a family throw on the switch.

after a burly man has failed at the job—and why the masculine faculty for dodging labor really should be turned loose on housework.

Much has been done in this line already. Many women, though far from a majority, have vacuum cleaners, washing machines and fireless cookers. Not so many have ironing machines, and very few have dishwashing devices or electrical refrigeration. None of them have the labor saving devices that could be invented if efficiency engineers were set at the task of simplyfing house-work and doing it by machinery.

It is high time to do this. The servant problem is bound to get worse, for the day of a class devoted to personal service is about over. The average home must be made self-sufficient in the matter of labor, and the only way to do this and maintain modern standards is by the intensive use of machinery. We must get our helpers from the laboratory instead of from Europe.

The female of the species is more thrifty than the male, but hitherto she has neglected to save herself. Do this now. Stop wasting time and effort—the only things that cannot be won back. Stop hiring people to do things that electric current will do cheaper and better. Hitch your household to the thrift machine, and Relics Presented with Speeches in House and Senate, Febr. 7 1843.

Speech of Hon. George W. Summers, of Fairfax County, in the House

Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of discharging an office not connected with the ordinary business of a legislative assembly. Yet, in asking permission to interrupt, for a moment the regular order of parliamentary proceedings, I can not doubt that the proposition which I have to submit will prove as gratifying as it may be unusual.

Mr. Samuel T. Washington(a citizen of Kanawha County, in the Comonwealth of Virginia, and one of my constituents, has honored me with the commission of presenting, in his name and on his behalf, to the Congress of the United States and through that body to the people of the United States, two most interesting and valuable relics connected with the past history of our country and with men whose achievements, both in the field and in the cabinet, bst illustrate and adorn our annals.

One is the sword worn by George Washington, first a sa colonel in the colonial service of Virginia in Forbe's campaign against the French and Indians, and afterwards during the whole period of the War of Indepndence as commander in chief of the American Army.

It is a plain cutleau, or hanger, with a green hilt and silver guard. On the upper ward of the scabbard is enraven "J. Bailey Fishkill." It is accompanied by a buckskin belt, which is seured by a silver buckle and clasp, whereon are engraven the letters "G. W." and the figures "1757." These are all of the plainest workmanship, but substantial and in keeping with the man and with the times to which they belonged.

The history of the sword is perfectly authentic, and leaves no shadow of doubt as to its identity.

The last will and testament of George Washington, bearing date on the 9th day of February, 1799, contains, among a great variety of bequests, the following clause: "To each of my nephews, William Augustine Washington, George Lewis, George Steploe Washinlgton, Bushrod Washington, and Samuel Washington, I give one of the swords or cutleaux of which I may die possessed; and they are to choose in the order they are namd. These swords are accompanied with an injunction not to unsheathe them for the purpose of shedding blood, except it be for self defense or in defense of their country and its rights; and, in the latter case, to keep them unsheathed and prefer falling with thm in their hands to the relinquishment thereof.'

In the distribution of the swords, hereby devised, among the five nephews therein numeratd(the one now presented fll to the lot of Samuel Washington, the devisee last named in the clause of the will which I have just read.

This gentleman, who died a few years since, in the county of Kanawha, and who was the father of Samuel T. Washington, the donor, I knew well. I have often seen this sword in his possession, and received from him the following account of the manner in which it became his property, in the division made among the devisees:

He said that he knew it to have during the Revolutionary War—not that used on occasions of parade and review, but the constant service sword of the great chief—that he had himself seen Gen. Washington wear this identical sword—he presumed for the last time—when, in 1794, he reviewed the Virginia and Maryland forces, then concentrated at Cumberland, under the command of Gen. Lee, and destined to cooperate with the Pennsylvania and New Jersey troops, then assembled at Bedford, in suppressing what has been called "the whisky insurrction."

Gen. Washington was at that time President of the United States, and, as such, was Commander in Chief of the Army. It is known that it was his intnetion to lead the Army in person on that occasion, had he found it necessary; and he went to been the side arm of Gen. Washington Bedford and Cumberland prepared for that event, The condition of things did not require it, and he returned to his civil duties at Philadelphia.

Mr. Samuel Washington held the commission of a captain at that time himself, and served in that campaign, many of the incidents of which he has related to me.

He was anxious to obtain this particular sword, and preferred it to all the others, among, which was the ornamented and costly present from the great Frederick.

At the time of the division among the nephws, without intimating what his preference was, he jocosely remarked, "that, inasmuch as he was th only one of them who had participated in military service, they ought to permit him to take choice.' This suggestion was met in the same spirit i nwhich it was made; and the choice being awarded him, he chose this, the plainest and intrinsically the least valuable of any, simply because it was "the battle sword." h rwnttlot.iad odfw mod om do oh d

I am also in possession of the most satisfactory evidence, furnished by Col. George Washington, of Georgetown, the nearest relative of Gen Washington, now living, as to the identity of this sword. His information was derived from his father, William Augustine Washington, the devisee first named in the clause of the will which I have read, from his uncle, the late Judge Bushrod Washington, of the Supreme Court, and Major Lawrence Lewis, the acting executor of Gen. Washington's will; all of whom conurred in the statement that the true servic sword was that selected by Capt. Samuel Washington. It remained in this gentleman's possession until his death, esteemed by him the most precious memento of his illustrious kinsman. It then became the property of his son, who, animated by that patriotism which so characterized the "father of his country," has consented that such a relic ought not to be appropriated by an individual citizen, and has instructed me, his representative, to offer it to the Nation, to be preserved in its public depositories, as the common property of all; since its office has been to achieve and defend the common liberty of all.

He has, in like manner, requested me to present this case to the Congress of the United States, deeming it not unworthy the public accept ance.

This was once the property of the philosopher and patriot, Benjamin Franklin.

By a codicil to his last will and testament we find it thus disposed of:

"My fine crab tree walking stick, with a gold head, curiously wrought in the form of the cap of liberty, I give to my friend and the friend of mankind, Gen Washington. If it were a scepter, he has merited it and would become it."

Gen. Washington in his will devises this came as follows:

"Item. To my brother, Charles Washington, I give and bequeath the gold-headed cane left me by Dr. Franklin in his will."

Capt. Samuel Washington was the only son of Charles Washington, the devisee, from whom he derived, by inheritance. this interesting memorial, and having it transmitted it to his son, Samuel T. Washington, the latter thus seeks to bestaw it worthily by associaing it with the battle sword in a gift to his country-

I cordially concur with Mr. Washington in the opinion that they each merit public preservation; and I obey with pleasure his wishes in here presenting them, in his name, to the Nation.

Let the sword of the hero and the staff of the philosopher go together. Let them have place among the produest trophies and most honored memorials of our national achievements.

Upon the staff once leaned the sage of whom it has been said. "He snatchd the lightning from heaven and the scepter from tyrants."

A mighty arm once wielded this sword in a righteous cause, even unto the dismemberment of empire, In the hand of Washington this was the "sword of the Lord and of Gideon." It was never drawn except in defense of the public liberty. It was never drawn except in defense of the public liberty. It was never shathed until a glorious and triumphant success returned it to the scabbard, with out stain of cruelty or dishonor upon its blade. It was never surrendered, except to that country which bestowed it.

Speech of Senator Cass in U. S. Senate

Mr. Cass, Mr. President, I must ask the indulgence of the Senate for requesting that its usual business may be suspended, in order to give me opportunity to discharge a trust which has been committed to me; a trust I have not the heart to decline, but which I knew I had not the power to fulfill as such a mission should be fulfilled. I hold in my hand the sword of Gen. Jackson, which he wore in all his expeditions while in the military service of the country, and which was his faithful companion in his last and crowning victory, when New Orleans was saved from the grasp of a rapacious and powerful enemy, and our Nation from the disgrace and disaster which defeat would have brought in its train. When the hand of death was upon him, Gen Armstrong as a testimonial of his high appreciation of the services, worth, and courage of that most estimable citizen and distinguished soldier, whose desperate valor on on occasion stayed the tide of Indian success and saved the Army from destruction. The family of the lamented depostary, now that death has released him from the guardianship of this treasure of patriotism, are desirous it should be surrendered to the custody of the National Legislature, believing that to be the proper disposiiton of the memorial which, in all time to come, will be a cherished one for the American people. To arry that purpose into effect I now offer it in their name to Congress.

Mr. President, this is no doubtful relic whose identity depends upon uncertain tradition, and which owes its interest to an impulsive imagination. Its authenticity is established beyond controversy by the papers which accompany it. and it derives its value as well from our knowledge of its history as from its associations with the great captain whose days of toil and nights of trouble it shared and witnessed, and who never drew it from its scabbard but to defend the honor and the interests of his country.

This is neither the time nor the place to portray those great traits of character which gave to Gen. Jackson the ascendancy that no man ever denied who approached him, and that wonderful l influence with his countrymen which marked almost his whole course, from his entrance upon a public career till the grave closed upon his life and his labors, and left him to that equality which the mighty and the lowly must find at last. Still from my personal and official relations with him—and I trust I may add, from his friendship toward me, of which I have many proofs—I can not withhold the acknowledgment of the impression which his high qualities made upon me, and which becomes more lasting and profound as time is doing its work of separation from the days of my intercourse with him.

I have been no careless observer of the men of my tim, who, controlled by events, or controlling them, have stood prominent among them, and will occupy distinguished positions in the annals of the age; and circumstances have extended my opportunities of examination of the Old World, as well as to the new. But, I say, and with a deep conviction of its truth, that I never have been brought into contact with a man who possessed more native sagacity. more profundity of intellect, higher power of observation, or greater probity of purpose, more ardor of patriotism, nor more firmness of resolution, after he had surveyed his position, and occupied it, than the lamented subject of this feeble tribute, not to him but to truth. And I will add that during the process of determination upon important subjects he was sometimes slow and generally cautious and inquiring; and he has more once told me, anxious and unasy, not seldom passing the night without sleep; but he was calm in his mind and inflexible in his will when reflection had given place a decision. The prevailing opinion that he was rash, and hasty in his conclusions is founded upon an erroneous impression of his habit of thought and action, upon a want of discrimination between his conduct before and after his judgment had pronounced upon his course.

This is not the first offering of a similar nature which has been laid upon the altar of our country, with the sanction of the legislative department of the Govrnment Some years since another precious relic was deposited here, the sword of him who in life was first in the affections of his countrymen and in death is now the first in their memory. I need not name his name. It is written in characters of living light on every heart and springs instinctively to every tongue His fame is committed to time, his example to mankind, and himself, we may humbly hope, to the reward of the righteous. When centuries shall have passed over us. bringing with them the mutations that belong to the lapse of ages, and our country shall yet be fulfilling, or shall have fulfilled, her magnificent destiny, for good, I devoutly hope, and not for evil, pilgrims from our ocean coasts nad our inland seas and from the vast regions which now separate but ere long, by our wonderful progress, must unite them, will come up to the high places of our land, sonsecrated by days and deeds of worldwide renown. And turning aside to the humble tomb, dearer than this proud Capitol, they will meditate upon the eventful history of their country and will reall the example while they bless the name of Washington.

And on the same occasion was presented the cane of Franklin, which was deposited in our national archives with the sword of his friend and colaborer in the great cause of human rights. Truly and beautifully has it been said that "peace hath its victories as well as war." And never was nobler conquest won than that achieved by the American apprentice printr, author, statesman ambassador, philosopher. and better than all, model of common sense, over one of the most powerful elements in the economy of nature, subduing its might to his own, thus enabling man to answer the sublime interrogatory addressed to Job, "Canst thou send lightnings, that they may go and say unto thee, Here we are?" Yes; thy now come at our command and say, "Here we are, Yes; they now come at our command and say, "Here we are, ready to do your work" And it was our illustrious countryman who first opened the way for this subjugation of the fire of heaven to the human will. The staff that guided the steps of Franklin and the sword that guarded the person of Washington may well occupy the same repository under the care of the Nation they served and loved and honored.

An dnow another legacy of departed greatness, another weapon from the armory of patriotism comes to claim its place in the sanctuary assigned to its predecessor and to share with it the veneration of the country in whose defense it was wielded.

The memorial of the first and great est of our Chief Magistrates, and this memorial of his successor in the administration of the Government, and second only to him in the gratitude and affections of the American people, will lie side by side, united tokens of patriotic self devotion and of sucessful military prowess, though they who bore them and gave them value by their services are now tenants of distant and lowly graves, separated by mountains and rivers and valleys. And in ages shut out from our vision by the far away future, when remote generations, heirs of our heritage of freedom, succeeding to it without the labors and privations of acquisition, shall

CALOMEL SALIVATES EVEN WHEN CAREFUL

Treacherous Drug Can Not Be Trusted and Next Dose may start Trouble

Calomel is dangerous. It may salivate you and make you suffer fearfully from soreness of gums, tenderness of jaws and teeth, swollen tongue and excessive saliva dribbling from the mouth. Don't trust calomel. It is mercury; quicksilver.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomen. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salviate.

A NEW MEDICINE OVER A HUNDRED YEARS AGO

The different Herbs, Roots and Barks, contained in Tonall, was used over a hundred years ago, by the Medical Profession, in their daily practice, and are used today by the successful practitioner, to combat the maladies which human nature is afflicted with, such as Heart, Liver, Kidney Ailments and all diseases arising from a disordered Stomach. When you stop to consider Tonall contains 13 different Herbs, Roots and Barks each Herb, Root and Bark known for its distinct medicinal properties, It is no wonder so many sufferers are today proclaiming the Merits of Tonall above any Proprietary Medicine, due to the facts no one or two herbs, roots and barks cured all the ailments human nature suffered with. But Tonall contains more herbs, roots and barks than any other proprietary medicine on the market, and that is one of the reasons why so many have found such wonderful relief after taking Tonall. The pioneers of this great and glorious country treated their ailments by making teas from herbs, roots and barks that are now used in Tonall, as you are well aware no chemicals or acids were used in the decoctions of the various teas made from nature's own products, herbs, roots and barks. There are thousands of suffering men, women and children in the United States today suffering untold agonies due to taking drugs which either poisoned their systems or they became fiends to drugs contained in the various nostrums. That is also one of the reasons why we publish on the label of the bottle the name of each herb, root and bark contained in Tonall. You know just what you are taking into your stomach the same as the food you eat. Tonall has no equal as a remedy for stomach, liver and kidney, catarrhal affections or as a tonic tissue builder and strength producer. You can eat what your appetite craves for after taking Tonall. Every vital organ in the human system is strengthened by Tonall. Tonall assimilates with the food you eat and the strength giving elements contained in Tonall are what your run down systef requires. Tonall purifies your blood, strengthens the nerves and assists nature to do her own work.

Tonall is sold at Edgar Warfield's, Jr., Drug Store, Corner King and Pitt Streets, Alexandria, Va.

Table Etiquette--- Artificial and Natural

CHESTERFIELD, whose precepts of politeness are forever famous, had a son who disgraced himself at public table by his boorish manners. There is a natural and a cultivated table etiquette. The natural is the true refinement which we practice without effort in surroundings that are not artificial. The informal cosiness of WALLIS dining rooms and plain, congenial fare and service relaxes and wins you. The commonsense prices have their charm for you, too.

IT'S SPRING AGAIN

Old world's awfully troubled;
Men know not where to turn
From lack and strife and discord;
Hate and Anger burn!
Everybody's worrying,
Everybody fears;
Seems like things are tottering—

Yet, midst all the turmoil
Rains the grasses bring,
Leaves and buds are bursting,
Carefree birdies sing;
As from the beginning,

gaze, as they will gaze, upon these testimonials of victories, timeworn but time honored, they will be carried back by associations to those heroes of early story and will find their love of country strengthened and their pride in her institutions and their confidence in her fate and fortunes incrased by this powrful faculty of the mind—a faculty which enables us to triumph over the distant and the future, as well as over the stern realities of the present, gathering around us the mighty dead and the mighty deds that excited the admiration of mankind, and will ever command their respect and gratitude. And thus will communion be held with the great leaders of our country in war and in peace, who wore these swords in her service, and hallowed them by their patriotism, their valor, and success.
